Here are things to consider when buying an oven for your home. 1. What type of oven do you need. If you are a light user and don't plan to roast, you can consider getting a microwave with added functions. 2. Are you furnishing your new kitchen. For my own kitchen, I have a builtin convection oven for grilling, roasting, and baking, a microwave for reheating food and a toaster oven for bread. I believe most kitchens have this setup. 3. Do you want it builtin or countertop. For beautiful kitchen aesthetics and spacesaving, have your oven builtin to your cabinets or kitchen countertop. If you want something portable, you can opt for a countertop version. If you are on a tight budget, you can get countertop ovens for cheaper. Countertop ovens though come in a smaller capacity. For an outdoor kitchen, you can consider a freestanding oven that comes with the stovetop. 4. What capacity do you need. The bigger the capacity, the more food you can cook in the oven. But it will also take up more energy each time you switch it on. Get a capacity that fits your household needs. 5.

What cooking functions do you want. Do you want a selfcleaning function. If so look for catalytic or pyrolytic ovens. Some ovens have smart functions, or touch screen functions. Electrolux lately launched a steam oven with a builtin camera to monitor your food. Types of Ovens in Singapore Gas oven Gas ovens, as its name suggests, uses gas as the power source, creating the heat for the oven. Getting a gas line fitted for the oven will be an added cost. You will find the gas option more commonly for freestanding cookers, like the Elba EGC836WH Free Standing Cooker with 37L Gas Oven. Freestanding cookers are very useful if you are setting up an outdoor kitchen. Electric oven Convection and Conduction Electric Ovens are the most popular option for homes. They are fairly cheap, easy to run, clean and suitable for a huge variety of home cooking needs. Electric ovens produce more even heat, making it great for baking. For electric ovens, you can choose between a conduction or convection oven. The difference is how they heat up the air. Convection ovens are better because they come with a fan installed at the back that helps to distribute the heat, allowing for more efficient and even cooking. Conduction Oven A conduction oven is sometimes called a "conventional" or "fan" oven. A conduction oven heats from the bottom up. Convection oven A convection oven is a more popular choice as it circulates heat with a fan at the back. The fan is designed to make the temperature in the oven more even. It also aims to cook food at a lower temperature, which makes cooking more efficient and saves you energy and money. You can choose a builtin, countertop or freestanding oven this comes with the gas stovetop.

Best builtin oven in Singapore, you can check out Bosch HBF114BR0K BuiltIn Oven with 7 Heating Modes Best countertop oven in Singapore Kenwood MOM880BS 32L Electric Convection Oven Best Freestanding Oven in Singapore La Germania RIS95C61LBX Free Standing Oven with Stovetop Selfcleaning oven It is important to clean your oven. For busy people that do not put oven cleaning as a high priority, this extra feature is a godsend. There are two types of selfcleaning ovens, pyrolytic and catalytic. Pyrolytic ovens will heat up to a very high temperature to burn off the food stains, reducing it to ash. You will only have to clean up the ash out of the bottom tray. Catalytic ovens are lined with chemicals that will absorb food spills before they can become burned on. That said, you still have to give your selfcleaning oven a wipe down from time to time. It makes it easier to clean but you will still have to do regular maintenance, just not as often as a regular oven. This stainless steel builtin oven comes with 8 cooking functions and a 53 litres capacity. With catalytic selfcleaning panels and easy to clean enamel coating, it is easy to maintain. Steam ovens have a reservoir which you have to fill up with water for the oven to work. The heat from the oven turns the water into steam. Pros Food cooked in steam retains more moisture compared to food cooked in a convection oven. This means you do not need extra oil. It is said that it also retains more vitamins and minerals than boiled food. Risk of overcooking is reduced Bread, bagels, pastries can be proofed, baked, and crisped Meats defrost gently and evenly, hot spots are eliminated You can use a steam oven to prepare an entire set meal at once Cons A disadvantage though, is that a steam oven does not brown foods the way a convection oven can.

More expensive than a conventional convection oven either that or smaller capacity Recommended Steam Oven in Singapore Bosch Series 8 HSG636ES1 60CM Builtin Oven with Steam Function Bosch, a German brand is well known for its reliable and stylish appliances with cutting edge technology. This is the latest Series 8 Builtin Oven that gives you the best of both worlds in one appliance. The steam baking function adds steam so that foods turn out crispy on the outside and juicy on the inside, and best of all, healthy. You can prepare a full set meal with all 3 levels at once. The convection function is optimised with PerfectBake and PerfectRoast to give you perfect results automatically. 4D hot air allows you to achieve even distribution on all levels. Check out Samsung MG28J5255US 28L Microwave Oven with Steam Function. Microwave Oven Microwave ovens are also electric ovens, but commonly known for heating up food. A microwave oven heats up food using electromagnetic waves. These waves vibrate the food particles. The friction will then cause the food to heat up. While microwaves were initially used purely for reheating food, the microwaves of today can do much more. The advantage of a microwave oven is that it is quick and energy efficient. However, compared with a convection oven, it will struggle with roasting, browning and baking tasks. Recommended Microwave Oven in Singapore LG MH6565DIS 25L Smart Inverter Microwave Oven with Neochef technology LG, the South Korean electronics giant has released its latest Smart Inverter technology that provides precise cooking power to reheat and defrost a wide range of foods faster than ever. If you struggle with even cooking for your foods, this microwave oven solves your problem with its even heating and defrosting. This is the microwave oven I bought for my kitchen. It does what it says it does and serves me very well. No doubt it is one of the top microwaves available. A few wipes is all it needs.

Compact size with bigger capacity. For an even bigger capacity, there is a 39 Litre model here. Though not an alternative to a full oven, it is useful for small tasks. Recommended Toaster Oven in Singapore Kenwood MO280 White Oven Toaster Many know Kenwood for their sleek kitchen machines. This wellknown British kitchen appliances maker is owned by the De'Longhi Group. I like the fact that they have a retro twist to their modern designs, and that their appliances are backed by functionality. This Kenwood Oven Toaster comes with a 10L capacity for you to grill and toast. With the auto shut off function, you do not have to worry about leaving it on. If you would like a bread toaster, check out Kenwood TTP210 4 Slice Bread Toaster. Builtin Ovens A builtin oven merges with fitted cabinets. They are very spacesaving and looks beautiful in any kitchen. The downside is that they are harder to install or move. Recommended builtin oven in Singapore Bosch HBF114BROK BuiltIn Oven with 7 Heating Modes Bosch is a German brand well known for it's reliable and stylish appliances. This 66 Litres builtin oven with 3D hot air can help you achieve perfect baking and roasting results on up to 3 levels simultaneously. But they take up countertop space in your kitchen and do not offer the seamless appearance of builtin ovens. Recommended countertop oven in Singapore Kenwood MOM880BS 32L Electric Convection Oven This healthy electric oven from Kenwood has a unique retro look. Made of stainless steel and powered with 1800W, it includes a grill rotisserie and convection functions. For a more modern look, check out Delonghi SformatuttoMAXI 32L Electric Oven EO32852 or the Cuisinart Convection Oven TCO600HK. A cheaper option would be the Cornell CEOE3621SL 36L Electric Convection Oven 2100W A budget option would be the PowerPac PPT45 45L Electric Oven with 2 Trays Freestanding ovens These are a complete unit and come with the stovetop combined on top of the oven.

These are great for smaller homes or outdoor kitchens. Recommended freestanding oven in Singapore La Germania RIS95C61LBX Free Standing Oven with Stovetop Why buy this oven La Germania is an Italian brand. You would need the stove hob and hood, hence getting a combo is a value for money option. You also get a seamless look. I have found you the best deals on Lazada. Check out this Bosch Gas burner bundle, and this Bosch induction burner bundle. So ultimately, which oven should I get. The type of oven you need largely depends on your cooking needs. For my own kitchen, I bought a builtin convection oven, a microwave oven and a toaster, each for its own usage. I believe most kitchens have this setup. It is important to note that microwave or toaster is not directly replaceable with a convection oven. FAQ about Ovens Q Which are the best brands for an oven. You won't go wrong buying from wellknown brands like Bosch from Germany and Kenwood countertop models, LG and Samsung both from South Korea are very good brands too but their builtins are probably available only B2B. For cheaper alternatives, you can opt for Electrolux Sweden, Cornell USA, Mayer Singapore or Elba Italy. EF and Techno are brands that I would try. Other brands you will see include Otimmo by EuropAce, Whirlpool from the USA, Hafele Europe, Turbo from Italy since 1974. Q Where to buy an oven in Singapore. You used to only be able to buy an oven from physical stores, but now you can purchase them online for the ultimate convenience and even enjoy discounted prices. Shopee is my goto for shopping electronics. If you prefer to see the oven inperson, you can always pop by to any of the consumer electronics stores like Best Denki, Courts, Harvey Norman and Gain City near you to check it out before purchasing online. Q Do I have to clean my oven. You have to remove the grease and grime otherwise it might affect the air circulation in your oven. This will affect the cooking.
